Some Interesting Facts About the Art of

The human character is divided into two parts, the animal and the intellectual. tay animal first, because the animal propensities are alway the atrongest, the intellect located in the brain having to keep in subjection the requirements of the are the eyes, the nose, and the mouth, and each of these features has its part to play in forming the character of the individual. The eyes, being located directly under the brain, are the feature of intellect and intelligent emotions: the nose, being formed of bone and cartilage, shows, secording to its beight and prominence, the executive of the individual; the greater the height and prominence of the bone the more soutiveness; and the mouth, which is uscles, is the feature which interprets the quality of the passions and senses. Thus the forehead and eyes are the intellectual, the nose and cheek bones the executive, and the mouth and chin the animal features, each defined according to its degree of development. The top of the eyeockets in the region of the perceptive for a great distance. faculties, which are located in the brain at the back of the frontal-sinus, and these to their external prominence.

The organs which are most discernible may be mentioned as follows: Form, color, order, calculation, time, tune, constructive-ness, causality, comparison, memory and congruity; but to be able to define them being the feature of intellect, we will com-mence by explaining their characteristics. Note particularly the manner in which they are placed in their sockets. There is more shrewdness with deep-set eyes than with prominent ones. The deeper the eyes are set in the head, the greater their proximity to the brain. Dr. Stretch-Dowse, is writ-ing of the nerve agent's velocity of trans-mission saves.

mission, says:
This estimation of velocity varies in regard to different individuals. In fact, we know from daily observation, how variable in different individuals is the rapidity of the sensitive and sensorial excitations, and that of the consecutive motor reactions. How common the remark that such a per-little troubled this morning. You look How common the remark that such a per-son's understanding is lively and active, or slow and dull. The difficulty which some persons have in catching a joke, which at once makes other people laugh, is a strik-ing example of inequality of perception. To be shrewd the brow must overhang the eyes; when the eyes are level with the fore-head it then denotes a lack of perception, and such people are dull and wanting in grasp. A projecting eye more readily regrasp. A projecting eye more readily re-ceives impressions from surrounding objects, it indicates ready and universal ob-servation, but a lack of close scrutiny and perception of individual things. Deep-set eyes receive more definite and accurate impressions, but their possessors are less readily impressed and less discursive in Narrow-eyed persons see less, but think ress. Marrow-eyed persons see less, but think more and feel more intensely. The larger the pupil of the eye, the clearer the intel-lect and the quicker the powers of compre-hension. People who show the whites above and below the pupil are generally very rest-less and half simple; you will seldom find this kind of eye in clever or sensible people; it is generally known as the stupid eye.

The color of the eyes is caused by fluids

The color of the eyes is caused by fluids of various tints and shades, the darker the more condensed in quality. Thus dark eyes indicate power, and light ones delicacy. There are no such things as black eyes, though they are often written and spoken about. The darkness is caused simply by a condensation of the pigment which, if dissolved in surfit or acid, would be of the solved in spiri' or acid, would be of the palest yellow tint. There are many characteristics applied to the color of the eyes, but I fear there is no anatomical basis for them. There is certainly more passion and intensity in dark eyes, whereas gray and light eyes are calculating, cool and precise. One generally hears of gray-eyed people being greedy; but this greed seems to me to be more the outcome of calculation and anxiety for gain than for the satisnence or anterior projection. Professor Ferrier and other anatomists have localized this organ in the same position as the phrenologists—viz., the third frontal convo-lution of the brain; but they term it speech, which is a more correct interpretation, as people are apt to imagine that the word language means the faculty to learn or speak foreign languages. That would be quickness of learning, and is called appli-cation. Language 'n this sense means elo-

cation. Language in this sense means eloquence, and great speakers and writers have this particular fullness under the eyes. You must be careful not to confound this fullness with "bagginess," the result generally of ill-health or dissipation.

The eyes of Charles Dickens, Disraell, Gladatone, Shakespeare, Byron, and many other great writers and speakers illustrate the organ of language. Musicians are generally fully developed under the eyes, but that is due to the development of the organs of time and tune, which lie at the top of the eyeball. Music is the language of the soul, and expresses itself in sound, as ideas would in speech. There is a great deal of character in the eyes, and their feeting expressions alone show almost all the mental emotions of mirth, fear, anger, horror, love and astonishment.

the senith of her popularity and health, she visited a small village school incog. and asked permission to put the children through their "paces." The schoolmistress was highly delighted. Although she was unaware of the high rank of her visitor, she guessed from outward appearances that the latter was of no common order. The children did their mistress credit, answering with great promptitude all the simple questions the Queen put to them.

Just before leaving the Queen noticed one little tot in a far corner of the room, with her targled head of hair bent over some book. The child was so deeply engrossed in her reading that she took no notice whatever of anybody in the room. The Queen asked the reason of her silence; was she deaf or otherwise afflicted? "Oh, no," was the answer, "but she is stupid and never attends to her studies, but seizes every opportunity to read story books." Carmen Sylva walked queltly up to the little reader, and putting her hand on the curly head, asked gently what the child was reading, and the latter held up the book to the strange lady. It was "Fairy Stories and Poems," by Carmen Sylva. "And de you like these tales?" asked their author. "Like finem, madame? oh, I love them!" And Carmen Sylva took the child in her arms, kissed the little flushed face, and departed. About a week afterward the child's aunt (for the little maiden was an orphan) received a letter from the Queen offering to educate and bring up the child. The offer was gratefully and thankfully accepted, and now the little one is in ohe of the best achools in Roumania. Lying in the picturesque valley of the Columbia river in British Columbia, with the Selkirk mountains on one side and the Rocky mountains on the other, is the town of Donald, on the Canadian Pacific railroad. It used to be known as a "wide open town," but it is now a sedate little place of nearly 2,000 inhabitants. It is the meeting place of composed of blood, usaue, nerves, and divisious of the railroad, and from that reason takes on a commercial importance that other towns of the same size along the railroad lack. It also has an added importance from the fact that it is the home of Sheriff Redgrave, the chief official of all that country around

"It was just 30 years ago today that was up in the Caribou country with the dearest friend I ever had. He was a noble fellow, one that I would have gladly given my life to any day were there occasion to do so. We were walking through a gorge one afternoon, and by a lamentable oversight had only one gun with us. My friend had that. Suddenly we came face to face with an enormous grizzly bear, one of the old time bears, tremendous fellows, such as we used to have in these mountains. The bear was angry, and I think had been stung by some bees. He showed fight, and I saw at a glance that it was either his life or one or perhaps both of ours. He came right for us, rearing and determined to kill us.

The bullet passed through his head, and the bear, turning just as it was passing through, deflected the bullet, so that it flew back to us and killed my friend instantly by my side. Yes, this is atways a very sad day with me, and I am sure you will excuse me if I don't show my accustomed cheerfulness."

Sheriff Redgrave has another thrilling experience that he relates occasionally, and it illustrates his fertility of resource in time of great emergency and reveals to some extent the reasons for his popularity and advancement in the estimation of his fellow citizens. The thumb is an unfailing index of character. The Square Type indicates a strong will, great energy and firmness. Closely allied is the Spatulated Type, the thumb of those of advanced ideas and business ability. Both of these types belong to the busy man or woman; and Demorest's Family Magazine prepares especially for such persons a whole volume of new ideas, condensed in a small space, so that the record of the whole world's work for a month may be read in half an hour. The Conical Type indicates refinement, culture, and a love of music, poetry, and faction. A person with this type of thumb will thoroughly enjoy the literary attractions of Demorest's Magazine. The Artistic Type indicates a love of beauty and art, which will find rare pleasure in the magnificent oil-picture of roses, 16½ x24 inches, reproduced from the original painting by De Longpré, the most celebrated of living flower-painters, which will be given to every subscriber to Demorest's Magazine for 1895. The cost of this superb work of art was $330.00; and the reproduction cannot be distinguished from the original. Besides this, an exquisite oil or water-color picture is published in each number of the Magazine, and the articles are so profusely and superby lilustrated that the Magazine is, in reality, a portfolio of art works of the highest order. The Fhilosophic Type is the thumb of the thinker and inventor of ideas, who will be deeply interested in those developed monthly in Demorest's Magazine, and was long ago crowned Queen of the Monthles. Neither of us had any medical education, and if we had it wouldn't have done any good, for we had no remedies with us, and it would have been impossible to make those Indians take any medicine. What do you think we did? We just rounded up all the Indians that had the disease, and when we were sure that we had every ene of them and had burned all their effects we buried all the Indians up to their necks in the ground and left them there for the night. The next morning we came around to see how they were getting along, and-would you believe it?-the wolves had come during the night and had eaten off the heads of every one of those Indians. That stamped out the epidemic in that whole section, and to this day there has never been a case of smallpox there. FOOLED THE POLICEMEN. Two Jokers In a Lofty Perch Finally Out-

Two young men, supposedly in a spirit of mischief, climbed up a big pole of the Bell Telephone company on Naudian street, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second, before daylight and established themselves in the 'crow's nest" just below the first of the wire bearing crossbars on a recent morning. There they sat and sang songs until a passing milkman called up and asked what they were doing. "Oh, ask of the man in the moon," warbled one, and the other said that they were hunting for the milky way. The milkman left in disgust and notified a policeman of the Fifth district that a pair of nuisances were holding forth "in a cage on a pole." The policeman summoned a brother patrolman, and the two went to the place designat-ed, where the jokers had changed their programme and remained as silent as the grave.

"Come down!" demanded the police men, but he received no answer. "If you don't, we'll come up and bring you down." "Then we'll gash dem cops away,

The threat was too much for the blue coats, so they replied that they would wait below until the men got tired of being up in the air and came down of their own accord. shals Came Back Whol

It was known in the United States marshal's office at Nashville that wildcat whisky was coming down the Cumberland river. The marshal was new in office, and therefore was determined to do his duty, which, of course, was to see that the illicit distilleries, no matter how remote, should be destroyed, and that the distillers should be brought to instice. His predecessor in office had been likewise determined and had sent brave men to the mountains, but whisky had continued to come down the Cumberland river. The present marshal, Captain Hayes, an old Confederate officer, said that he thought that when the boys found out that he really wanted them to quit they would do so. He understood them, he knew their natures, their impulsiveness and their disposition to yield to persuasion. So he sent a deputy and four men to tell the boys to quit. One night about a week later some one rang the doorbell, and the marshal himself went to the door.

"Why," said he, "have you got back, Caney?" Cancy answered, "Yes, just about." "Where is the deputy marshal?"

"Well, he's back too." "Why didn't be come around?" "Well, I 'lowed that his folks needed him more than you did, so I unload
